LEE SKARIN AND ASSOCIATES... the Name Dentists have Trusted Most Since 1959. BROKER OR NO BROKER

There have always been some Sellers that have considered the expense of a practice broker as unnecessary and have embarked on the "for sale by owner" or FSBO path. Certainly, some of those transactions have gone smoothly and without incident. As a frequent expert witness in dental practice sale matters, I can tell you that the percentage of sales that result in problems leading to litigation is far greater with a FSBO sale than with a brokered sale. Part of the problem stems from the simple fact that FSBO Sellers, in a continuing attempt to cut costs, often choose not to use an attorney and take a 'cut and paste' approach to the sale agreement using bits and pieces from other sale contracts. This often leads to inconsistent agreements with conflicting language that mislead, confuse and incite post-sale litigation.

Problems also arise with a FSBO sale when a well meaning Seller overstates the practice income or potential and makes a representation to a Buyer that the Buyer relies upon in making his/her decision to purchase. When the representation turns out to be untrue, the Buyer looks to the Seller to make it right. Buyers gain considerable protection from such overly zealous Seller statements when the transaction is handled by a licensed practice broker.

With lenders preferring to deal with reputable brokers, financing for FSBO transactions is far more difficult, especially now. Brokers will prepare a loan package that assists a bank underwriter in understanding each unique practice and can select the lender best suited for any given practice transaction. Without that expertise, FSBO Sellers are more likely to find themselves waiting months for a lender's decision and/or in the position of needing to "carry paper" or provide Seller financing. From the standpoint of tax planning or return on investment, this may sound like a good idea, but if the Buyer has any financial difficulty it is the Seller that will not be paid.

These are just some a couple of the many potential pit falls associated with a non-brokered sale that are substantially reduced or completely eliminated with a broker's expertise.

For all of your practice sale questions, call Kurt Skarin at Lee Skarin and Associates.

ASK THE BROKER

Question:

What are the biggest impediments to a practice sale?

Richard C, DDS

The answer is easy...BAD INFORMATION! I am amazed how many dentists provide information on their practices that simply does not make sense! Accurate financials and specific responses to a buyer's questions are important. We all understand that there are certain tax perks to owning our own businesses compared to being employees. However, if the seller's accountant is "unusually adept" at creative accounting, buyers and their lenders will have trouble seeing the value of the practice. It may be difficult to get full market price or financing if the financials are not clearly understood.

As the old computer saying goes, "Garbage in...Garbage out". Tax returns that don't match the P&L's, that don't match the computer reports, that don't match the bank statements, create problems that persist beyond the obvious complications. The completed questionnaire also needs to correspond to your computer generated office reports.

Sometimes, perfectly honest sellers slightly exaggerate their responses on new patients or active patients, resulting in skepticism about all other aspects of the practice. This created doubt often leads to a chain of events which may "spook" the buyer and result in the buyer's decision to back out of the practice purchase even in the final stages of escrow.

In this economy, buyers are concerned with being successful in their new practice and are saavy when looking at the practice' financials and bottom line. From our experience, if some information is mistakenly misreported or a discrepancy is found, the damage to the credibility of the practice can be irreparable, even when all the discrepancies are eventually sorted out. In this litigious society, my advice is this: Be clear, be honest and when in doubt, understate your practice. Buyers will be pleasantly surprised if their research reveals a more positive result!

Actual letter from client:

Let me start off by saying I love the Trojan Benefit Service Program. Other offices where I have worked in the past did not subscribe to the service, and let me tell you what a difference it makes in my daily routine.

Because I use Trojan's Benefit Service Program I have more time to do all of the necessary duties my job requires. I remember staying on hold for hours a day checking the eligibility of patients' insurance policies. I have more time to take, and return, patient phone calls, and to answer the phone and patients' questions since I am no longer on hold with the insurance companies. I send appointment reminder postcards and collect and post payments. I have more time to overview patient accounts and confirm appointments so that the doctor's production remains steady and there is no wasted time on the doctor's schedule. I can overview the doctor's schedule weeks in advance, including making phone calls to fill holes in the schedule.

With my extra time I find myself pulling charts to follow up patients who may have canceled or never scheduled appointments for treatment. This is valuable for the doctor's production, as well as for the patient's well being. I take extra time to thoroughly explain to the patient about their involved treatment plan and make sure they understand it completely before scheduling. This ensures that a patient is more apt to schedule their treatment and is less likely to cancel or reschedule due to a misunderstanding.

I now can call to give the patient reminders about their appointments, such as bringing their night guard and making sure the patient has enough pre-medication. I have more time to follow up on patients who we have referred to specialists, and to coordinate patient appointments with our doctor and the specialist he refers the patient to.

The Trojan Benefit service program is also helpful in updating insurance plans. If an employer our patient works for changed their insurance company, Trojan automatically updated the new insurance information to all patients carrying that plan once they have researched it, rather than me having to change each patient's plan individually in our computer system. I also find the printouts I receive back by fax and the information provided on the insurance notes very helpful for patients who are in the chair and resistant to treatment home and pre-authorizing the needed treatment. I can check the benefit print out or notes section in the computer and successfully estimate their coverage for the recommended procedures. Almost 100% of the time the patient will stay for his or her treatment. This saves time for the doctor and patient and boosts the doctor's production for that day.

Having more time to do the "extras" is beneficial to the practice and to the patients as well. Thank you, Trojan, for your help in making this practice run smoothly.

Nicole Golden

"I am amazed at the ease of this service I can review charts and verify benefits in half the time it used to take when done manually. I am so happy we can save valuable time and spend them with our patients instead of on the phone with insurance companies. We contact Trojan when a patient comes in with new insurance and Trojan gets us the information faxed before the patient leaves our office so we look extremely efficient." “With tax increases going into effect Jan. 1, 2011, I don’t have much time and if I price my practice wrong, it will not sell in time. I’ve gotten conflicting appraisal information from brokers...

who do I trust?”

Banks today seldom loan more than 80 or 85% of one years Gross Collections for a purchase. Couple that with today’s more sophisticated Buyers who will only pay “Fair Market Value”, ie “The Value that an open market will bear for a typical practice, given a willing Buyer, a willing Seller, and adequate time to market” and you see that your concern is valid. Some Brokers will tell the Seller whatever he wants to hear to secure the listing. Often that means overpricing the practice... They will then work the Seller to reduce the price after awhile, but by then the best Buyers have ruled out the overpriced practice.

At D&M we’ve responded to Sellers concerns & issues for over 16 years with hundreds of successful results. Our concern for the Seller is to ensure his practice can be sold quickly & get funded in today’s financial atmosphere. That requires honest pricing, not pie-in-the-sky pricing that will chase away qualified Buyers. If you want a timely sale with no “Broker Puff”, then contact D&M for a no-obligation, confidential consultation.
